COUPLES ON THE BRINK COUNSELING

Couples On The Brink Counseling strengthens and preserves marriages where possible. If a marriage is ending, it offers a safe landing for a family-friendly divorce.

It is short-term (1 to 5 sessions) and has different goals and formats than traditional couples therapy.

Research shows that many people remain uncertain about getting divorced even after the legal process is well underway.

Over 30% of couples express interest in reconciliation services.

25-35% of divorcing parents have doubts about ending their marriage.

PAUSE & REFLECT: Couples On The Brink Counseling Goals

- 1 Provides clarity and confidence to couples to determine their next steps in their marriage.
- 2 Examines the marriage from both partners' perspectives and a professional's viewpoint.
- 3 Evaluates the feasibility of resolving problems and maintaining the marriage.
- 4 Assists couples in deciding between pursuing a divorce or making a final, committed effort to restore their marriage.
- 5 Identifies one's own part and where personal growth is needed, regardless of the outcome of the marriage.

FOR COUPLES WHEN:

- One partner is eager to preserve the relationship and open to couples therapy, and the other partner is ambivalent about the relationship and hesitant to try couples therapy.
- One partner wants to give the marriage another chance, while the other partner is moving toward divorce.
- One or both partners is considering divorce but unsure.
- One or both partners longs for one last look at their relationship before making a final decision.
